

Requirements: Gender and Sexuality Studies

Interdisciplinary

The major and concentration in gender and sexuality studies offer students an opportunity to engage in two important and interrelated areas of study. Students examine aspects of experiences that have traditionally been underrepresented in academic studies. For example, the lives and works of women and the experiences of gay, lesbian and trans individuals. Students examine gender as a cultural phenomenon and as a system of ideas defining "masculinity" and "femininity" and delineating differences between "the sexes" as well as "normal" expressions of sexuality. In the process, students encounter some fundamental methodologies of gender and sexuality studies and work toward an increasingly rich understanding of gender as a social construction, one that intersects with class, race, age, ethnicity, nationality, sexual orientation and sexual identity. Students also explore the methods and concepts of gender and sexuality studies in a variety of academic disciplines, integrating, for instance, sociology, psychology, literature, the biological sciences and art history. Students come to understand how questions of gender are deeply embedded in the liberal arts tradition.

The Kenyon College faculty voted to change from Kenyon units to semester hours. This change will go into effect for all students who start at the College in the fall of 2024. Both systems will be used throughout the course catalog with the Kenyon units being listed first.

The Major and Concentration

The major and concentration encourage and enable students to take responsibility for their own learning. Toward this end, courses invite students to participate in a range of collaborative work. This culminates in the senior colloquium, where students determine the content and intellectual direction of the course as a whole. Ultimately, students are encouraged to acquire a sophisticated insight into the consequences of the social construction of gender for both women and men, an insight that empowers them to engage and question the pervasive role of gender in their own lives and communities. Students construct their major by choosing courses from the offerings of both the Gender and Sexuality Studies Program and more than 15 other departments and programs across the College.

First-year and New Students

GSS 111 (Introduction to Women's and Gender Studies) is a wide-ranging interdisciplinary course designed to help students develop a critical framework for thinking about questions relating to gender. Students examine the historical development of gendered public and private spheres, the relation of biological sex to sociological gender, and the difference between sex roles and sexual stereotypes. They attempt to understand how racism, heterosexism and homophobia intersect with the cultural constructions of masculinity and femininity, and consider ways to promote more egalitarian gender relations. Students also are encouraged to explore more specialized areas of gender studies in courses specifically designed for students at all levels, including first-year students. These include GSS 121, 221 and 232. Students completing GSS 111 can enroll in GSS 242 to explore gender studies in a more global context.

Requirements for the Major

A minimum of 11 courses is required for the major:

Introductory requirement - one course

- Any 100-level GSS course

Mid-level requirements - two courses

- GSS 330: Feminist Theory
- GSS 331: Gender, Power, and Knowledge: Research Practices

Diversity and globalization

Two courses that focus on the social and cultural issues of U.S. and/or world peripheral communities. Consult the chair for a list of courses that may be applied to this requirement.

Electives

Four elective courses that must be drawn from at least two departments (including GSS). Students should consult the four-year listing of all approved courses. A required major areas form(pdf) must be completed and submitted to the Registrar's Office, indicating these elective courses. For approval of transfer credit and study-abroad courses, students should consult the chair of the department.

Senior Colloquium - two courses

- GSS 480 (Senior Colloquium Planning) during the fall semester, a course meeting once a week to design the colloquium.
- GSS 481 (Senior Colloquium) during the spring semester, examines a topic central to feminist thought. It includes current feminist texts and incorporates multidisciplinary analyses of race, class and sexuality, in addition to gender. The course culminates in a public presentation by colloquium members.

Senior Capstone

Majors give a public presentation on a topic related to the senior colloquium for their Senior Capstone.

Requirements for the Concentration

Six courses in women's and gender studies:

- GSS 330: Feminist Theory or GSS 331: Gender, Power and Knowledge: Research Practices
- GSS 480: Senior Colloquium Planning
- GSS 481: Senior Colloquium

Four approved elective courses, which must be spread over at least two divisions of the College. No more than two courses in a single department may count toward this requirement.

Honors

The major who wishes to participate in the Honors Program must have a GPA of 3.33 overall and of 3.5 in the GSS major. The candidate in honors completes all requirements for the major as well as the Senior Capstone. The candidate takes two semesters of independent study and designs and completes a research project. This project should integrate feminist theory and methodologies, as well as the student's chosen disciplinary or interdisciplinary cluster. Honors students prepare an annotated bibliography on their chosen project during the fall term. After approval, the senior honors project is undertaken in consultation with a project advisor.

We encourage students to think boldly and innovatively about the kinds of projects they undertake and about how those projects interact with and benefit their communities. Senior honors projects might include gender-focused sociological or historical studies undertaken locally; exhibitions, productions or installations of gender-exploratory art, music or theater; or political, social and/or environmental service-oriented or activist work. Students are closely mentored throughout their projects and, in the spring, are evaluated by an external evaluator and by faculty in the program and in relevant disciplines. The evaluators assess the strength of the students' overall work, as well as the strength of their self-designed, project-appropriate public presentations of that work.

Transfer Credit Policy

The Gender and Sexuality Studies Program typically accepts transfer credits from other colleges and universities for courses that meet Kenyon's requirements for transfer credit. We especially encourage students to take courses that are not regularly offered in our curriculum. We do not permit students to earn transfer credits through online evaluation or two-week special courses offered during winter breaks. All transfer credit must be pre-approved by the department chair.

GSS Courses and Diversification Requirements

Any two GSS courses paired will satisfy the social sciences diversification requirement.

Additional courses that meet requirements for this major/concentration

Complete listing of courses that count toward the GSS major or concentration can be found on the GSS department page.

Courses in Gender and Sexuality Studies

Introduction to Gender and Sexuality Studies

GSS 111 Credits: 0.5/4

This course provides students with critical frameworks for thinking about the social construction of gender at the personal and institutional levels. Emphasis is placed on diverse women's significant contributions to knowledge and culture; to other areas of gender studies, including men's studies, family studies and the study of sexuality; and to the intersections of various forms of oppression both within and outside of the U.S. The course includes both scholarly as well as personal texts, visual as well as written text. This counts toward the introductory requirement for the major. This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. No prerequisite. Offered every semester.

Introduction to Queer Studies

GSS 121 Credits: 0.5/4

This course is designed to help students develop a critical framework for thinking and writing about intersectional issues related to sexuality, sex, gender identity and gender expression. The course takes a broad view of examining queer and transgender issues from sociopolitical, legal, psychological, biological, cultural, ethical, philosophical and historical frameworks. We look at the fields of queer theory and LGBTQ+ studies out of which some of the most innovative and challenging developments in modern cultural studies are arising. Additionally, we examine the ways in which society interacts with queer and transgender identities in a number of spheres, including politics, health care, the arts, the sciences and more. This counts toward the introductory and diversity and globalization requirements for the major. This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. No prerequisite.

Gender and Race in Popular Culture

GSS 150 Credits: 0.5/4 QR

This course examines how popular culture (e.g., media) represents gender through making observations, reading background theory, examining content analysis research and conducting our own research. We examine the extent to which popular culture depicts gender-stereotyped behavior, the content of the gender stereotypes, the possible reasons that stereotypes are portrayed, and the likely effects of these stereotypes on the behavior of individuals and the structure of society. To the extent possible, we examine the intersection of stereotypes about gender with those associated with race/ethnicity, social class, age and sexuality. This course satisfies the quantitative reasoning requirement because students learn about descriptive statistics and put them to use by conducting their own content analysis (in a small group) and presenting and writing about the results of their research. In a service-learning component to the course, students develop a media literacy lesson for high school students based on what they learn about their topic. This course is designed for first-year students. This counts toward the introductory requirement for the major. This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. No prerequisite. Offered occasionally.

Topics in Masculinity

GSS 232 Credits: 0.5/4

Through focus on a specific topic, this course explores how men's lives are shaped by and shape the gendered social order. Macro and micro perspectives guide discussions focusing on how men behave in particular contexts and how they perceive themselves, other men and women in diverse situations. Specific topics investigating the production of masculinities take into account the interplay among the cultural, interpersonal and individual layers of social life while considering how men's efforts are enabled or constrained by key socially relevant characteristics (primarily age, race/ethnicity, class and sexual orientation) through investigations, for instance, of particular sites (e.g., playgrounds, work space, home, schools, athletic venues, prisons). This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. No prerequisite. Offered occasionally.

Transnational Feminisms

GSS 242 Credits: 0.5/0

This course examines the impact of globalization on feminist discourses that describe the cross-cultural experiences of women. Transnational feminist theories and methodologies destabilize Western feminisms, challenging notions of subjectivity and place and their connections to experiences of race, class and gender. The course builds on four key concepts: development, democratization, cultural change and colonialism. Because transnational feminisms are represented by the development of women's global movements, the course considers examples of women's global networks and the ways in which they destabilized concepts such as citizenship and rights. We also examine how transnational feminisms have influenced women's productions in the fields of literature and art. Key questions include: How does the history of global feminisms affect local women's movements? What specific issues have galvanized women's movements across national and regional borders? How do feminism and critiques of colonialism and imperialism intersect? What role might feminist agendas play in addressing current global concerns? How do transnational feminisms build and sustain communities and connections to further their agendas? This counts toward the diversity and globalization requirement for the major. This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. Prerequisite: Any GSS course. Offered every other year.

Feminist Theory

GSS 330 Credits: 0.5/4

In this course, we read both historical and contemporary feminist theory with the goal of understanding the multiplicity of feminist approaches to women's experiences, the representation of women and women's relative positions in societies. Theoretical positions represented include liberal, cultural, psychoanalytic, socialist and poststructuralist feminism. We explore the relationship of these theories to issues of race, class, sexual preference and ethnicity through an examination of the theoretical writings of women of color and non-Western women. This counts toward the concentration and the mid-level requirement for the major. This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. Prerequisite: any WGS/GSS course, approved departmental course. Offered every other year.

Gender, Power and Knowledge: Research Practices

GSS 331 Credits: 0.5/4

This course examines feminist critiques of dominant methodologies and theories of knowledge creation in the sciences, social sciences and humanities. It focuses on the following questions: How do we know something? Who gets to decide what counts as knowledge? Who is the knower? In answering these questions, this class explores how power is exercised in the production of knowledge, how the norms of objectivity and universalism perpetuate dominance and exclusion, why women and other minority groups are often seen as lacking epistemic authority, and what it means to have knowledge produced from a feminist standpoint. Students learn a variety of methods and use these methods in a community-based research project. This project involves working with community partners in Knox County and may require student participation outside of the scheduled class time. In addition, we discuss various ethical issues that feminist researchers often encounter and what responsibilities feminist researchers have to the broader political community. This course has a community-engaged learning (CEL) component. Students may be required to travel off-campus for site visits. This counts toward the mid-level requirement for the major. This course paired with any other 0.5 unit WGS/GSS course counts toward the social science diversification requirement. Prerequisite: any WGS/GSS course, approved departmental course or permission of instructor. Offered every other year.

Literature and Law: Consent, Transgression, Resistance

GSS 360 Credits: 0.5/4

Stories of sexual violence against women serve as foundational myths of a Western culture that bases its prestige upon the rule of law. This course examines some of those narratives, beginning with medieval ideals of courtly love, alongside of legal discourse on sexual assault. The aim is to unpack the parallel practices by which literary and legal narratives are mutually implicated in the system of gender relations that sustains sexual assault, and those that cordon off implementation of sexual assault law from cultural practices that continue to encourage sexual assault (rape culture). Because contemporary American scripts about sex and romance arguably go back to the ideologies of romance, courtship, and seduction represented in courtly love literature of the Middle Ages, there is much to be gained by looking at literature in tandem with legal procedures. To explore the complementary roles of law and literature in sustaining and challenging sexual assault, we use the recent history of Title IX. We are interested in the ways that the existing legal order challenges, but also contributes to--perhaps even perpetuates--the disempowerment and devaluation of women. As sexual assault deprives women of physical, spiritual and psychic integrity, we return throughout the course to narratives of resistance, justice, survival and healing. This class engages difficult, often deeply personal issues. We approach all material, topics and content from an academic perspective, but it will engage difficult topics that may elicit a highly emotional response. This course counts toward the elective requirement for the major. No prerequisites.

Senior Colloquium Planning

GSS 480 Credits: 0.25/2

This course provides the opportunity for those students taking WGS 481 in the spring to plan the course. Students select a topic, order books, plan the syllabus and design a project. In addition, they read about course design and pedagogy so that they are prepared to take responsibility for collaboratively teaching the course in the spring. Offered only on a credit/no credit basis. This course is required for the major. This interdisciplinary course does not count toward the completion of any diversification requirement. No prerequisite. Senior standing.

Senior Colloquium

GSS 481 Credits: 0.5/4

The senior colloquium is organized around a theme determined by senior majors and concentrators in consultation with the instructor during the semester prior to the beginning of the course. Previous topics include "Women and Madness," "The Politics of the Bathroom" and "Gender and Tourism." This course is required for the major. Prerequisite: GSS 480 or permission of instructor. Offered every spring.

Individual Study

GSS 493 Credits: 0.25-0.5/2-4

Individual study enables students to examine an area not typically covered by courses regularly offered in the program. The course can be arranged with a faculty member in any department but must conform to the usual requirements for credit in the program: Gender is a central focus of the individual study, and the course draws on feminist theory and/or feminist methodologies. The amount of work should be similar to that in any other 400-level course. Individual study courses may be used toward the major or concentration. To enroll, a student should first contact a faculty member and, in consultation with that professor, develop a proposal. The proposal, which must be approved by the program director, should provide a brief description of the course/project (including any previous classes that qualify the student), a preliminary bibliography or reading list, an assessment component (what will be graded and when) and major topical areas to be covered during the semester. The student and faculty member should plan to meet approximately one hour per week or the equivalent, at the discretion of the instructor. Because students must enroll for individual studies by the end of the seventh class day of each semester, they should begin discussion of the proposed individual study by the semester before, so that there is time to devise the proposal and seek departmental approval. This interdisciplinary course does not count toward the completion of any diversification requirement.

Senior Honors

GSS 497 Credits: 0.5/4

The major who wishes to participate in the Honors Program must have an overall GPA of 3.33 and a GPA of 3.5 in the major. The candidate in honors completes all requirements for the major, the Senior Capstone and two semesters of independent study and designs and completes a research project. This project should integrate feminist theory and methodologies as well as the student's chosen disciplinary or interdisciplinary cluster. Each honors student prepares an annotated bibliography on the chosen project midway through the fall semester. After approval, the senior honors project is undertaken in consultation with a project advisor. Students are encouraged to think boldly and innovatively about the kinds of projects they undertake and about how those projects interact with and benefit their communities. Senior honors projects might include gender-focused sociological or historical studies undertaken locally; exhibitions, productions or installations of gender-exploratory art, music or theater; or political, social and/or environmental service-oriented or activist work. Students are closely mentored throughout their projects and, in the spring, are evaluated by an external evaluator and faculty in the program and in relevant disciplines. The evaluators assess the strength of the students' overall work, as well as the strength of their self-designed, project-appropriate public presentations of that work. Permission of instructor and department chair required.

Senior Honors

GSS 498 Credits: 0.5/4

The major who wishes to participate in the Honors Program must have an overall GPA of 3.33 and a GPA of 3.5 in the major. The candidate in honors completes all requirements for the major, the Senior Capstone and two semesters of independent study and designs and completes a research project. This project should integrate feminist theory and methodologies as well as the student's chosen disciplinary or interdisciplinary cluster. Each honors student prepares an annotated bibliography on the chosen project midway through the fall semester. After approval, the senior honors project is undertaken in consultation with a project advisor. Students are encouraged to think boldly and innovatively about the kinds of projects they undertake and about how those projects interact with and benefit their communities. Senior honors projects might include gender-focused sociological or historical studies undertaken locally; exhibitions, productions or installations of gender-exploratory art, music or theater; or political, social and/or environmental service-oriented or activist work. Students are closely mentored throughout their projects and, in the spring, are evaluated by an external evaluator and faculty in the program and in relevant disciplines. The evaluators assess the strength of the students' overall work, as well as the strength of their self-designed, project-appropriate public presentations of that work. Permission of instructor and department chair required.

Concentration

Courses that meet the requirement for this concentration:

AFDS 410	Between Womanist and Feminist Theories
ARHS 375	Topics in Renaissance and Baroque Art
CHNS 222	Women of the Inner Chambers (in English)
ECON 378	Economics of Women and Work
ENGL 210	Proper Ladies and Women Writers
ENGL 214	Reading and Writing Gender and Sexuality
ENGL 223	Writing Medieval Women
ENGL 227	Love, Sex and Desire in Medieval Romance
ENGL 266	Decolonization and Violence
ENGL 269	Introduction to Caribbean Literature
ENGL 286	Transgressive Friendships in American Literature
ENGL 359	Middlemarch
ENGL 361	Pacific Poetry
ENGL 362	20th-Century Irish Literature
ENGL 368	Departures and Arrivals
ENGL 370	Transnational South Asia
ENGL 371	Whitman and Dickinson
ENGL 381	Multiple Americas: Narratives of the Hemisphere
ENGL 384	Imagining America in the Novel
ENGL 386	Toni Morrison
ENGL 388	Studies in 20th-Century African American Literature
ENGL 389	Gender Sexuality in Native American Literature
ENGL 390	Black Women Writers
ENGL 453	Jane Austen
ENGL 461	Virginia Woolf
FREN 340	Identity in the Francophone Novel
GERM 250	Politics and Gender in German Cinema after 1990 (in English)
HIST 208	U.S. Women's History
HIST 232	Modern European Women's History
HIST 236	Modern Germany: Gender, Race, and Class
HIST 341	African Women in Film and Fiction
HIST 352	Family and State in East Asia
HIST 370	Women and Gender in the Modern Middle East
HIST 373	Women of the Atlantic World
HIST 407	Manhood/Masculinity in U.S. History
PHIL 209	Feminist Philosophy
PSCI 315	Gender and Politics in the U.S.

PSYC 221	Adult Psychopathology and Social Suffering
PSYC 227	Cross-Cultural Psychology
PSYC 228	Latino Psychology
PSYC 246	Psychology of Women & Gender
RLST 103	Encountering Religion: Gender and Sexuality
RLST 219	Christian Mysticism
RLST 345	Religion for Robots: Cyborgs, Sci-Fi and Posthumanism
SOCY 225	Notions of Family
SOCY 231	Gender, Power, and Policy
SOCY 232	Sexual Harassment: Normative Expectations and Legal Questions
SOCY 241	Sociology of Gender
SOCY 250	Systems of Stratification
SOCY 255	Women, Crime and the Law
SOCY 277	Sociology of Sexualities
SOCY 421	Gender Stratification
SOCY 422	Topics in Social Stratification
SOCY 463	Intersectional Theory
SPAN 280	Cultural Productions of the Borderlands
SPAN 281	Resisting Borders: Contemporary Latino(a) Literature and Film
SPAN 347	Sex, Science and the Realist Novel in Spain
SPAN 353	The Literature of National Experience in Argentina
SPAN 371	Gender, Identity and Power in Women's Literature